"Memons are not a nation. At best they are a tribe, a nomadic tribe at that. They have no land or country that they can call exclusively their own. Nor do they have an aspiration for such. They have no king, crown, flag, anthem or a leader to whom all and sundry swear allegiance. There was a time when the size of the bank balance of the Balance Sheet determined the leadership. Now with proliferation of wealth and the far-flung settlements of the Memons, the need for a leadership is of little consequence." read more in A History of Memons, by Anwar Motan] [also posted at memoncommunity.blogspot.ca]
